6. Project USEFUL

This annual one-week orientation, given to 47 senior military officers from major overseas and continental commands, ended on 6 October. The objective of the program was, of course, to enhance CIA-DOD cooperation by explaining in some depth to the participants what the Agency is charged with doing and what its capabilities are in peace and war. The student critiques reflected that the orientation made a very positive impression.

7. Research Topics at Senior Service Schools

8. Defense Intelligence School under Pressure to Reduce Personnel

Our representative at the DIS reports that the school is being pressured by DIA management to identify "low priorities" which would, if dropped, result in a reduction of personnel. Although a few courses have been identified for possible elimination, it is thought that this action will have a negligible effect on CIA participation at the DIS. For example, if the Strategic Intelligence Course were shortened, it is unlikely that the request for OTR speakers would be altered.

9. New Course for DIA Functional Managers

A new thirty-hour course for twenty-five participants has been custom-made for DIA by Kornbluh-Barnett Associates, Inc. at a cost of $5,000. Titled "Effective Systems Development," the course will cover such subjects as systems planning, systems analysis, design, modeling, evaluation and systems long range planning. The first running will take place in early November.

10. Non-Agency Briefings

During this reporting period the following non-Agency briefings were given: a) Major General Wesley Franklin, Deputy Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence, and 13 members of his staff in the USIB Conference
